Editorial Review

About the Author

Marc Paulsen's background began with building construction and expanded to include fine art dealing, interior design, airplane sales and real estate development. Mr. Paulsen has served on management assignments ranging from trade show exhibitions of national scope and museum consultant to project manager for high-rise office construction and large sawmill machinery installations. He has traveled numerous countries and, while serving with the U.S. Armed Forces in Germany, wrote many articles on tourism. Marc's interest in the famed Medjool date came about as a fluke. While enjoying desert sunshine in southern Arizona, he stopped to take photos of men working high in date palm treetops. A palm grove worker invited him to come into the grove to film the palms close-up. This book is the result of that simple original effort to take an unusual and interesting photograph.
