The Perfume Bottle: One Act Play By Trisha Sugarek

In Violet and Ivah's opinion, the old hag, that lives down the road, is just a big tattletale. She seems to see every little thing that the Guyer kids might be doing and then she runs straight to Mama. Ivah has finally devised the perfect 'pay back'. Dragging her younger sister along, she will execute the perfect plan. A perfume bottle full of bodily fumes. They say what doesn't kill you makes you stronger. Well, we'll just see if old lady Pruitt can survive this bottle of 'heavenly' scent! 3f.

Editorial Review

Review

Sugarek's short plays are an astonishing work that finds a way to say so much with so little, and turns the bare stage into every young man and woman's living room. A perpetual battle ground for issues of trust and mistrust, laughter and misery, overwhelming loss and astounding triumph. --BookReview.com

From the Inside Flap

Fiction by this author: "WILD VIOLETS" It's the roaring twenties in San Francisco, a decade famous for hot jazz and bath tub gin.

Violet (The Guyer Girls) has grown into a beautiful woman with children of her own. She has left her small home town in the Pacific Northwest to pursue a successful basketball career. With her earnings, she purchased a bar and grill. She is a 'flapper' in every sense of the word; working all day and dancing all night. While her teenage daughter raises her seven year old son, Violet is out on the town with her latest man de'jour. Dressed in her signature red dress, she is the toast of the town and owner of a speakeasy where she hosts the cream of San Francisco's society, city politicians, bishops, and Hollywood celebrities.

and: "Women Outside the Walls"

Alma, Kitty and Hattie have one thing in common. The men they love are in prison. Wives visit their men behind bars every day and wonder how their lives brought them to this place.

This story focuses on three of these women. Alma is an exotic dancer who seems, at first glance, to be a bit of a nit-wit. But on closer inspection she has a street-smart wisdom and humor. Hattie is a hard working African American with four children who is trying to keep her family together. Then there is Kitty, a wealthy socialite, who in spite of the shame and embarrassment of visiting a prison where her husband refuses to see her, doggedly visits every week.
